This space is a taxidermy and animal sanctuary. The design proposal is centered around the wildlife within the Hambrook Marshes. The narrative behind this project is a political satire highlighting how human pollution is killing our wildlife. This space reflects a sanctuary for the animals to live in, where they are protected without becoming extinct. This is a community space for Wincheap to experience their wildlife before there are no more wild animals left to see. When the animals then die of natural causes, there is a specific space on the first floor for taxidermy, where visitors can immerse themselves and learn new skills.
