Research archive for home and nature collections, exploring the psychological differences between an objective and subjective exhibitionary experience through 'Refuge and Prospect' theory

BUDDING PROSPECT STAGE

In the middle of the archive lies the Budding Prospect Stage, allowing new Aspirerers and Academics to share their knowledge at an intimate venue. The stage is surrounded by plants and the large archways allows for natural light to shine through. Sheer curtains can be drawn to play projections and create a more private room.

FOLK ARCHIVUM

Folk Archivum is a research archive where accumulators, academics and aspirers can all come together and appreciate the wonders of collections. The archive allows people to store or donate large scale collections of both home possession or naturalia. There is room for academics to study collections for research papers and network with people of similar interests. The archive is open to the public to visit and learn more about their own psychological make and the way they navigate the expansive archive and theatrical transition spaces within the chapel. Are they the dweller, the curious, the surveyor or the informed?

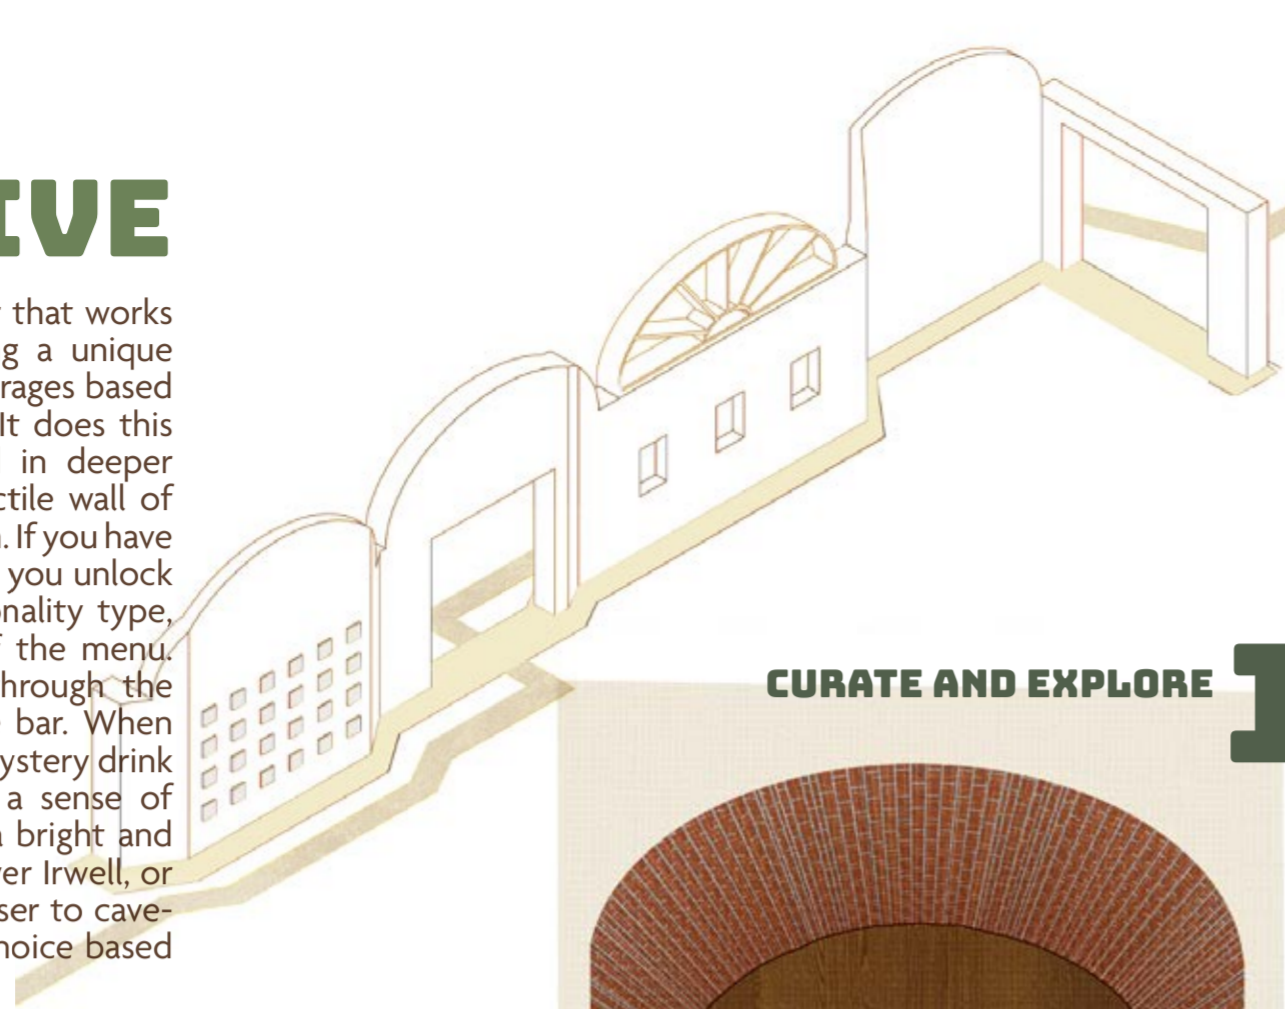

- The Dweller
- The Curious
- The Surveyor
- The Informed

THE ARCHIVE

The Archive, is the reinvention of a bar that works in union with Folk Archivum providing a unique space for the curation of bespoke beverages based on your personality type and psyche. It does this through interactive design embedded in deeper psychological decisions, including a tactile wall of aroma-boxes and vessels to choose from. If you have visited the collections in Folk Archivum you unlock a special cocktail based on your personality type, which you can then order straight off the menu. Or if you'd prefer you can venture through the ingredient selection process inside the bar. When you have curated your beverage, your mystery drink is then assembled and revealed with a sense of theatre, which you can then enjoy in a bright and open prospect, looking out over the river Irwell, or in a more intimate and dark refuge, closer to cave-like walls and vaulted ceilings - your choice based on "Prospect and Refuge" Theory
